Drive-by 'flocking'

Yolo County Supervisor MICHAEL McGOWAN woke at his West Sacramento home Sunday to find a flock of fake flamingoes on his front lawn. The "flocking" added a dash of shocking pink to McGowan's yard, and was staged by members of the West Sacramento Soroptimist club. You can arrange to have a friend's yard "improved" with a flock of flamingoes for a $50, tax-deductible donation -- which helps support the service group's community projects. To order someone flocked, call Jennie Baumeister at 375-3383 or (707) 592-1348.

Class studies West Sac neighborhoods

The city of West Sacramento and its parks department have commissioned a UC Davis graduate student class to study the future of the city's sometimes-overlooked northern neighborhoods. The results of the class's study will be presented at a public meeting form 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday at the Veterans of Foreign Wars building, 1708 Lisbon Avenue.

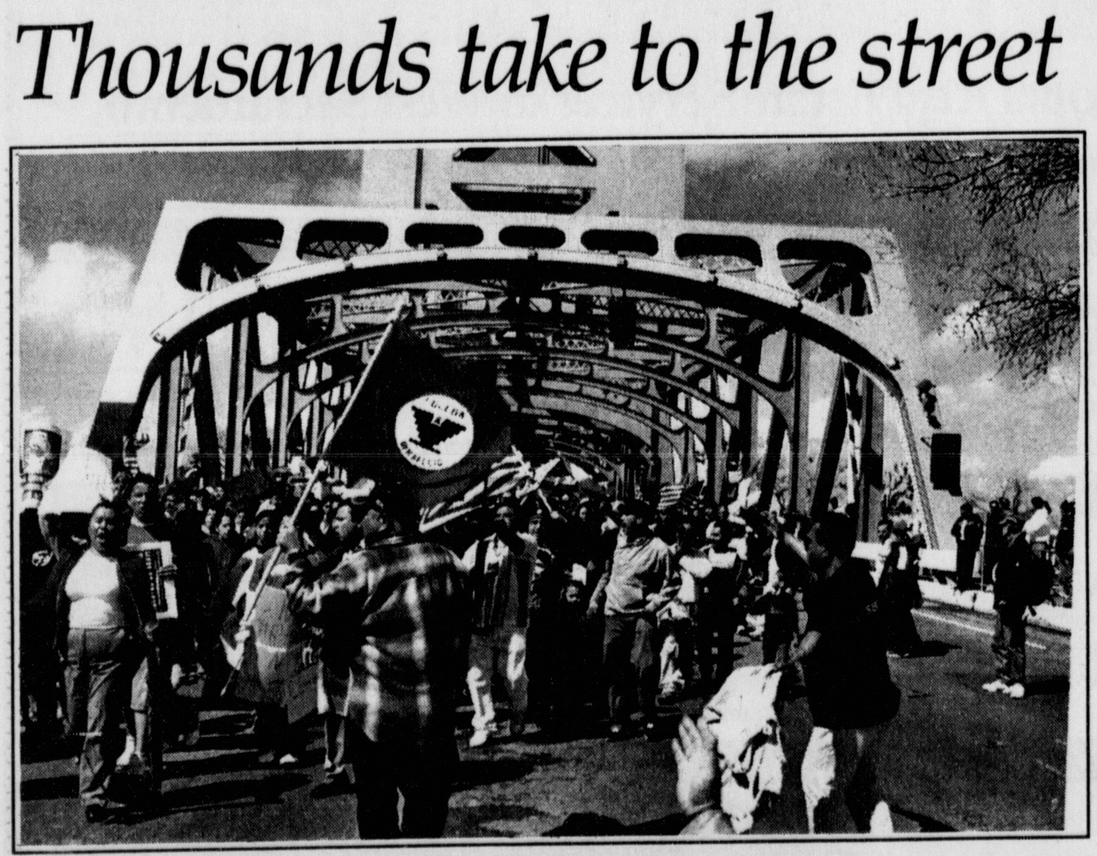
The northern neighborhoods, including "Bryte" to the northwest and "Broderick" to the northwest, are historic older neighborhoods in West Sacramento. They are home to many middle- and lower-income residents.

"Some residents feel as if they are being neglected by city officials and have been left behind in West Sacramento's burgeoning economic development," said UCD's Vanessa Cajina in a press release announcing the meeting. "Combined with a gang injunction that targets residents of the Broderick neighborhood specificallyl, city officials have been concerned that the relationship between those neighborhoods and local government is strained, and are looking for ways to see this changed."

A graduate class from the university's Department of Community and Regional Development conducted a ten-week study assessing available services and "the direction of youths in the neighborhoods" as well as the community's "overall vision for itself." The class also interviewed residents, service providers, police, educators, religious leaders and others.

The result is the report, titled "What's Up, Bryte and Broderick? A discussion about the future," which will be released to the public on Saturday.

Thousands take to the street



A 'CESAR CHAVEZ DAY' march to the state capitol on March 25 began in West Sacramento on West Capitol Avenue before crossing the bridge and heading to the capitol building. Activists agitated for immigrants rights. Some also carried signs alluding to injustice perceived as part of West Sacramento's anti-gang injunction. One such sign said, "I am NOT a profile; end racism in West Sacramento."

Mayor comes out

Cabaldon talks about the struggle & decision to say he's gay

CHRISTOPHER CABALDON

Mayor
City of West Sacramento

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon's speech last Wednesday at the annual "State of the City" dinner and address was 56 minutes long, and it covered a number of weighty public issues. But it was the last five minutes of Cabaldon's talk that left West Sacramento, the media, and much of the region abuzz.

Cabaldon announced that he was homosexual.

"The pressure and the stigma and sometimes the all-too-casual bigotry in this town made it painfully clear when I first ran for office that I could either serve this community or I could be a gay man," he said. "But I could not be both."

Cabaldon, 40, explained that he was revealing this thing about himself to help make it easier for others with a similar secret. And in return for his admission, he received a standing ovation from the nearly 200 in attendance, as well as numerous private expressions of support, from the dinner attendees. Then he joined the thin ranks of openly-gay mayors and public officials – ranks that are especially meager outside liberal urban bastions such as San Francisco.

Sacramento Mayor Heather Fargo gave Cabaldon a hug following the speech, and West Sacramento's first mayor, Michael McGowan (now a Yolo County Supervisor) applauded him for "courage."

Cabaldon told the News-Ledger his remarks capped a long process of "coming out," first to those who were closest, and now to the wider public.

"I've been coming out to friends and family over the past couple of years," he said. "You don't do that by showing up at Christmas with a date. You talk about it. And I think it was important to (make this speech) rather than show up at a Rotary pancake breakfast with a guy in tow."

He added that he isn't dating anyone, and hasn't been dating – but the time has come to allow for at least the possibility of both a personal life and a public life.

Cabaldon's mother is deceased, but his father lives in Orange County (a famously conservative area) and the mayor also has a brother and a sister.

How did his family take the news when he broke it to them?

"Fine," said Cabaldon. "I don't come from Berkeley or West Hollywood or San Francisco. My dad and others have struggled with it and have worked through it. For my siblings, it wasn't really a problem, but that's largely a generational issue."

"My friends have been uniformly supportive," he added.

How has city hall reacted?

"So far, we haven't had a council meeting since then, but there's been no mob with torches yet, and nobody has burned my desk," he related.

On the other hand, a city hall spokesperson said that on Friday -- two days after the "State of the City" speech -- a man asked the city manager's office how to begin the recall process against Mayor Cabaldon. He was referred to the election code, and told that it was too late to get a recall onto the June ballot and that Cabaldon is up for re-election in November.

On the whole, though, "the reaction has been inspiring," Cabaldon said.

"Since the speech, I've got hundreds and hundreds of letters and emails, and people grabbing me on the street and being totally supportive," Cabaldon related. "I've heard from some people who say they work for the City of West Sacramento or for Raley's and are 'struggling with whether to be honest with my co-workers,' or 'I wasn't sure whether to do it and now I'm going to do it.'"

Underlying Cabaldon's decision to come "out of the closet" was turmoil, he said.

"There have been plenty of times over the past year and a half when I said 'I don't want to do this. My personal life is no one's business.' I still feel that way, but also feel I should be an example."

Being gay "remains stigmatized," Cabaldon said. And he recalled an exchange in the News-Ledger's "letters" section a few years ago, as West Sacramento community members debated, heatedly, whether gay students at the local high school ought to be allowed to have a support club.

"I went back and re-read those letters, and my memory of how vivid and nasty the debate was was correct," said Cabaldon. But he said he also gained strength from some of the tolerant voices in those letters, and the fact that some of those came from longstanding, long-contributing members of West Sacramento's community fiber.

Is being gay a "lifestyle choice?," he was asked.

"Hopefully, one of the things people will learn from my experience, from my denying any kind of personal life, is that it's not something that people would 'choose,'" he replied. "I can't. I've been genetically wired this way, and this can lead to a lot of unhappiness and other unnecessary pain in people's lives."

"On the gay and lesbian themed network, I've watched the 'coming out' stories, and was emboldened to start the 'coming out' process with friends and family. I could see myself in a lot of those other stories, and it helped give me the courage to do it. Even among gays and lesbians not 'in the closet,' there are very few stories of gay and lesbian folks in politics that have been positive stories. There have been scandals, or people 'outed,' or blackmailed. I thought it was important to set a different kind of example, and that by documenting my story it could make a difference for gay and lesbian people across the country."

Cabaldon allowed an MTV-owned network focusing on gay issues to follow him on his "coming out" journey, and then he went public. He chose the "State of the City" address for its format and its timing.

"I didn't want to do it immediately after an election or during a campaign," he explained. "The State of the City is the only time I'm speaking directly to the community – only a few hundred people are at the dinner, but it is rebroadcast throughout the community. In terms of respect for the residents of this city, they need to hear it from me, explained in my voice."

"People, voters, have a right to know, and they need to hear from me directly."

Now, after a huge blitz of media attention, Cabaldon hopes people can digest the issue and then move on.

"I told them at the dinner: look, I've been one of the only Filipino mayors in the country for as long as I've been in office. But Raley Field was constructed without bamboo. Club Pheasant doesn't sell lumpia. And you can't get adobo at the Nugget hot food counter. This is not going to change the level or style of leadership from me. You won't see rainbow flags on Jefferson Boulevard or lavender medians on West Capitol."

And in case you want to know just a little more about the mayor's private life:

Christopher Cabaldon is a graduate of UC Berkeley in environmental economics, and holds a master's degree. He is president of EdVoice, a nonprofit organization in

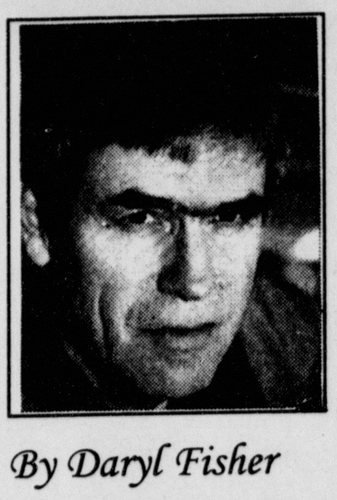
Why am I always the last one to know?

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

"Oh my God -- the News-Ledger has been scooped!" I cried out last Thursday morning as I opened up my Sacramento Bee and saw the front page headline that read, "West Sac mayor ends his silence -- he's gay."

I immediately raced over to the phone and called a longtime friend of mine (I'll call him John) who always keeps his finger on the pulse of West Sacramento politics and as soon as he said "Hello" I yelled, "Have you seen today's Sacramento Bee yet?"

"No," answered John matter-of-factly. "I haven't even had my morning coffee yet. And why are you calling me so darn early and talking so loud?"

"You're not going to believe what has happened!" I exclaimed.

"What?"

"Guess."

"I don't want to guess."

"Go ahead, guess."

"Stop it! You know I hate to guess about things. Just tell me what happened."

"Okay, but are you sitting down?"

"No, I'm standing up trying to make myself a cup of coffee!"

"Well, you better sit down."

"Daryl, I don't want to sit down, and I don't want to guess. Please, just tell me what happened."

"Okay, but you're not going to believe it."

"Tell me!"

"Are you ready for this?"

"I'm ready!"

"Okay -- Christopher Cabaldon, our beloved mayor, outed himself last night at the annual State of the City dinner at City Hall! Our mayor is gay!"

"Is that all this phone call is about, Daryl?" asked John with apparent indifference.

"You mean you're not surprised?" I asked in amazement.

"Of course not. Everyone in town knows the mayor is gay -- except for you I guess."

"You're kidding?" I asked, still in shock. "How long have you known?"

"For ages and ages. In fact, ever since the very first pitch of the very first baseball game at Raley Field. Weren't you there covering it for the newspaper?"

"No."

"Well," explained John, "they had our mayor throw out the first pitch and after he did this really lame windup he proceeded to throw the ball about ten feet straight into the ground -- just like my sister used to do when we would play catch when we were kids. I mean, it was easily the sorriest toss of a first pitch by a dignitary at a baseball game I have ever seen in my entire life. And there have been other signs, too."

"Other signs?" I asked with interest.

"Yeah, not only is our mayor a pretty fastidious dresser, but anyone with even the most basic knowledge of politics knows that he is much too bright, articulate and knowledgeable of the issues to be just another straight politician."

"I see," I said, still struggling to get my head around the fact that our mayor is gay -- 'not that there is anything wrong with that.'

"Are you okay?" asked John, noticing that I hadn't uttered a word in quite some time.

"It's just that I always kinda assumed that Christopher was going to find the right girl for him someday, put aside all that political ambition, settle down on Meadow Road in that cute little house of his with all the creative landscaping, put a big white picket fence around it, and live happily ever after in heterosexual bliss."

"Well," said John, "none of us get it all."

"That's so true."

"And if I were you," added John, "I would start worrying more about yourself than Cabaldon."

"Just what do you mean by that?" I asked, not having a clue what he was talking about.

"Well," said John reluctantly, "if you want to know the truth, Daryl, there's been rumors floating around out there about you for a long time now, too."

"Rumors? About me?"

"You know -- about you and that Marschke guy."

"You mean Steve Marschke, my longtime friend and the crack editor of the News-Ledger?"

"That's right, and you have to admit, you and he have been working together -- just the two of you -- in a tiny little cramped office for over 15 years now. I mean, you two might as well pitch a pup tent and start tending sheep. People are talking."

"You're kidding?"

"No I'm not. Plus you don't help yourself any by walking all over town in those red tennis shoes of yours. And you have to admit that you do have a pretty strong feminine side."

"A strong feminine side?"

"Well," explained John, "think about it -- you don't like to fish or hunt or tell dirty jokes or get drunk with the guys or work on cars -- I bet you don't even know how to change the oil in your truck, do you?"

"Well, no."

"See what I'm saying? And West Sacramento is still a relatively small town, you know, and rumors are pretty easy to start, and awfully hard to stop."

"So what do you think I should do?" I asked with alarm.

"Well, for starters," said John, "you really need to deep-six those red tennis shoes of yours. Then, once the sunshine is finally here to stay and it gets a little warmer outside, I think you should definitely get out a glove and ball and start working on your arm!"

Note: Last week, someone was kind enough to drop off a book at the News-Ledger for me to read entitled "Patriots -- The Vietnam War Remembered From All Sides", but he didn't leave his name. So assuming he sees this column from time to time, I just wanted to say thanks -- I really enjoyed reading it!

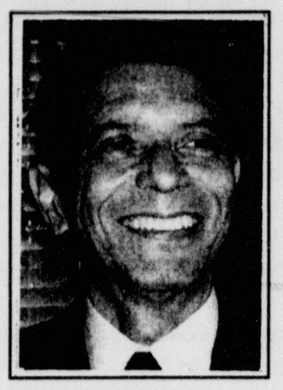
SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa



By Richard Novoa

The Florida Gators (32-6) shocked the college basketball world by putting together a stunning six-game winning streak to claim their first NCAA Men's basketball championship. The Gator's were led to the big dance by MVP, Joakim Noah, and a bunch other sophomores who just hustled and outplayed their opponents. The Gators are well coached but their key to victory was a simple fact that the kids had fun playing and it showed on the court. The youthful Gators out played the UCLA Bruins 73-57 on Monday night to win the State of Florida their first collegiate national basketball title.

I think Barry Bonds is going to need earplugs every time he takes the field on the Giants road games. Mr. Bonds was greeted loudly in San Diego on Monday night by 43,767 jeering baseball fans. The anti-Bonds fans seemed to enjoy the harassment but he was also insulted and embarrassed by a fan that threw a plastic syringe in his direction. It's going to be a long season for number 25, who is chasing Babe Ruth's home run record. Bond's has hit 708 home runs and Ruth's record is 714.

Also, Mr. Bonds will have an entourage with him at his games to film his every move for his new documentary series, "Bonds on Bonds". His new emotional series debuts with a one-hour special on Tuesday night on ESPN2 and then will be aired weekly every Tuesday at 4 p.m. And I thought Terrell Owens was the king of sports drama!

Major League Baseball

The big bad New York Yankees ruined the Oakland A's opening night on Monday by slamming Barry Zito and the A's 15-2 before new sellout crowd of 35,077. The A's have closed the upper deck of the stadium to reduce the total number of seats for sale. No more empty looking stadium shots for TV.

Zito's earned run average (47.25) took a beating after giving up 7 runs in less than 2 innings. The good news for the A's was that it didn't rain and newly acquired Frank Thomas hit his first home run in an A's uniform.

The A's will be at home playing the Yankees until Wednesday and then they will travel up north on Thursday to play the Seattle Mariners this weekend. The Giants, who also loss their first game of the season, will be home for their opener on Thursday (1:05 p.m.) against the Atlanta Braves.

Kings Korner

The Sacramento Kings (42-40) are just two games over the .500 mark but more importantly they still have a two game lead over the ninth place Hornets in the push for the playoffs.

The schedule gets real tough this week with back-to-back games in Texas. The Kings will play in Dallas on Tuesday night but on Wednesday (5 p.m.-CSN) night in San Antonio the Kings will have to try on the Spurs for size. The Spurs have beaten the Kings twice this season and if the season ended today these two teams would meet in the best of seven playoffs.

The playoffs are not a lock. The season is coming down to the last eight games for the Kings but the good news is that four games are in the friendly confines of the Arco Arena. The schedule is tough but not impossible.

After their Texas road trip the Kings will stop in L.A. to play the Clippers again on Friday night (7:30 p.m.-CSN) before they come home Sunday (6 p.m.) to host the playoff fading Houston Rockets.

After this exciting week of basketball the Kings will be down to their last four games of the regular season. On April 11th the Kings will host Phoenix then fly to Denver on the 15th. The Kings will then return home on April 16th for their big game against New Orleans/Okla. City Hornets followed by a season finale against Ray Allen and the Seattle Super Sonics.

Go Kings! Enjoy your day – see ya next week!

Varsity Boys Baseball

The varsity boys baseball team is playing very well. They have an 11-1 record, with a 2-0 record in league play. River City's Larry Ayson leads the league in steals, and Ian Grant has the third-best earned run average (ERA) among pitchers in the league. The squad beat Dixon twice last week, 3-0 and 5-1. This week they face Rio Linda.

Girls Varsity Softball

The girls varsity team is also playing well. They are currently in second place, with a 4-1 record in league play. This week, they face Rio Linda and Highlands High.

Girls Varsity Softball

The girls varsity team is also playing well. They are currently in second place, with a 4-1 record in league play. This week, they face Rio Linda and Highlands High.

Girls Varsity Soccer

The varsity soccer team played only one game last week, losing to Center High School 8-0. This week, they face both Foothill and Vanden.

Swimming Team

Both the boys and girls teams were victorious against Center High School. The boys won 92-49 and the girls came out on top 111-52. Total score is determined by the overall place of each swimmer in all events.

Boys Golf

Last week, the team competed in the CVC conference tourney in Solano. They placed fifth, beating both Foothill and Highlands. Center High School won the tournament. This week, River City faces Foothill High in a league match.

RC tennis matches: rained out

The River City High School tennis team had both of its matches postponed last week as rain washed away the home match against Foothill and a lack of opposing players at Sacramento Country Day forced the Raiders into an inter-squad scrimmage. Both matches will be made up in the next ten days, weather permitting. RC is 10 and 0 in 2006 and alone in first place in the Capital Valley Conference with a 6 and 0 mark.

Sacramento dealing in "educational reform." One of his recreations is the sport of wakeboarding. And the famous "policy wonk" also enjoys a little light reading.

"I much prefer to read science," said Cabaldon. "Physics and linguistics and stuff like that. I don't like reading policy for fun, and I don't watch 'West Wing' for the same reason – I'm inundated with policy in both my day job and as mayor."

Cabaldon said his current political ambitions reach as far as his plan to seek reelection this November. He is a former candidate for state assembly (defeated by fellow Democrat Lois Wolk of Davis), and did not say whether he hopes for another crack at state office.

The "rest" of the mayor's "State of the City" speech will be featured in an upcoming News-Ledger. Chief topics included continued work on the city's levees and flood control, and more focus on "healthy" (walkable, bikable and tree-lined) neighborhoods.

City to talk about flood control; other meetings include K-8 talks

West Sacramento's City Council plans to hold a workshop on the topic of flood control tonight at its 7 p.m. meeting.

Among the other agenda items are a proclamation endorsing "New Orleans Musicians Clinic" as a "City Cousins Partner"; a memorandum of understanding in favor of making SMUD the city's new electrical service provider (replacing PG&E, in a proposed deal that is still tentative); extending a mutual aid agreement with Sacramento Fire Department for hazardous materials response; and consideration of a waiver of public safety fees for the school district's use of Raley Field as a site for the 2006 River City High School graduation ceremony.

The Port of Sacramento's governing board is set to meet at the same location, 1110 West Capitol Avenue, at 5 p.m. An agenda was not available at press time.

West Sacramento's Planning Commission will meet at 6 p.m. Thursday at the civic center.

Among the list of agenda items is a "kickoff meeting" for the city's general plan update process. City consultant Mintier & Associates will work with city officials to prepare a work program for the general plan update.

A task force investigating the possible creation of "kindergarten through eighth grade" schools in the Washington Unified School District will meet Monday at 4:30 p.m. at Yolo High School, 920 Westacre Road.

The task force will discuss a RAND report, talk about features desirable in a K-8 program, and other related items.

OPINION

FROM THE MAILBAG:

Letters to the Editor

Cabaldon disclosure courageous

I grieve that the injustice in our society has taken away decades of freedom for Mayor Cabaldon to seek a life partner, if he chooses. It is a freedom I think most of us take for granted, and yet it is still denied to those who are not of the dominant sexuality -- and often in the name of Christ!

I hope that the mayor's courageous disclosure will help open our eyes and hearts to create a more just and compassionate human community for all.

Chavez march a success

The Cesar Chavez March was a wake-up call across America from half-a-million protesters in Los Angeles to several thousands in other cities. Today the sleeping giant has finally woken up to exhibit their claim to the American dream and to be recognized for their contribution as hard-workers showing their impact and role in American society. No longer will racism and anti-Latino bigotry continue to deny the Latino population their role in our democracy. A new page in history took place at the peaceful Cesar Chavez March and there is now light at the end of the tunnel.

Immigration thoughts

"If it walks like a duck, ...", et cetera. Or, with apologies to ol' Bill -- the bard -- "Amnesty, by any other name, would stink just as foul." Where else, but in the bowels of government would the payment of a fee, fine, or tax redefine the English language? Some may have their thirty pieces of silver from whatever "interests" are in need of indentured servants, voters, et al, but my country's sovereignty, safety and integrity are not for sale.

If you believe the recent demonstrations in heavily Latino areas of the country are by or for the "poor yearning to be free" then just check the ratio of American flags to Mexican, Salvadorian, Venezuelan, Atzlan and others. If you do, you'll notice the open desecration of Old Glory (used as a handkerchief, headband, et cetera) on those few occasions when you do see her. I've heard demonstrators openly declare they're ready to fight us to "take back their land, which we stole from them", and that's why they're in our capitals, cities, and so forth.

Oh, yes. Where in all these proposed legislative "suggestions" are there any penalties for anyone who doesn't obey the new laws? What happens if the newly documented don't register to pay their fines, penalties and back taxes? What happens if employers continue to recruit illegals because they'll work for less than the newly documented willing workers? In light of all this, I not only say no. I say hell no!

Help Mexican economy

While good jobs are still lost to the U.S., our political and business leaders should compare this to outsourcing across the Atlantic Ocean. At least by going south to Mexico and creating more living-wage jobs there, it seems we could more effectively stem the main source of our illegal immigration problem. Imagine an improved Mexican economy able to train for and retain more better-paying jobs. Could this not dramatically reduce our illegal immigration problem and the costs thereof? This would make more sense than criminalizing and imprisoning or trying to emigrate them back south.

I understand Mexican laws prohibits our folks from taking jobs down there. Sounds like it's time for President Bush and Mexico's President Vincente Fox to come to terms as to how to best implement such a program, including temporary tax breaks for participating businesses.

But as long as Fox seems to deny the problem and Bush has higher priorities, is the "Fox hiding behind the Bush?"

Thanks!

We want to thank the many sponsors who gave so generously to "Kick Off" the Yolo Children's Health Initiative (CHI). Thanks to early contributions by First 5 Yolo ($625,000), Yolo County ($100,000), The California Endowment ($100,000) and Kaiser Permanente ($37,000). Yolo County is proudly joining the ranks of other counties throughout California seeking to ensure all children receive the health care they need to be healthy and successful in school.

Thanks also to other major contributors, including Grupe Company/West Riverview, LLC ($12,000), Richland Communities ($12,000), KB Homes ($12,000), Waste Management ($7,500) and the California Endowment ($5,000). We are well on the way to raising the needed $1.2 million per year to ensure every child in Yolo County has health insurance.

Other generous donors who contributed include Steve Basha, Jolaine and Wes Beers, Kara and Roger Clarkson, Marc Concepcion, D.O., First Northern Bank, Julie Gallelo, Jackie Hausman, Kronick, Moskovitz, Tiedman & Girard, Mike McGowan, Jacque McLaughlin, Emily Nahat, Partnership Health Plan, Riviera Lakes, LLC/University Park, Sierra Health Foundation, Mary Stephens, Helen Thomson, Tim Lewis Communities, Vineyards at Cache Creek Ranch, West Sac Land Company, and Wildlands, Inc.

Because of these dedicated companies and individuals, Yolo CHI will be able to reach out to our most vulnerable and help families enroll in the health insurance program that fits their situation -- Medi-Cal, Healthy Families, Healthy Kids, or Kaiser Child Health Plan.

Most of the money raised will go to pay for premiums to insure children 0-18 years in the new Yolo Healthy Kids program that provides insurance coverage for children who do not qualify for other programs. Immigration status is not a barrier to coverage in Healthy Kids.

The Yolo CHI is a collaborative program of First 5 Yolo and the Yolo County Children's Alliance. For more information please call 530-757-5558.

CRITIC'S CORNER
By D.N.A Smith

"V for Vendetta"

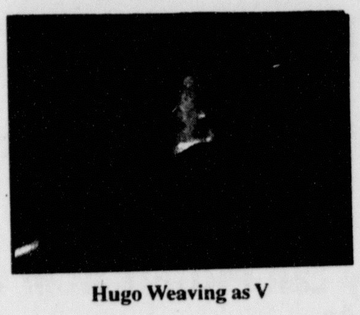
Running time: 132 minutes
MPAA rating: R

It is the year 2020. America is in the grip of civil war, plague and chaos. In England, people are under the thumb of a totalitarian despot named Sutler (William Hurt). Britons are constantly under surveillance; on the TV a religious-right demagogue rails against well, everything; food is rationed and curfews imposed.

This is the dystopian near-future presented in "V for Vendetta," director James McTeigue's adaptation of Alan Moore's graphic 1980s novel. The problem with this adaptation is that Moore's book was a leftist reactionary screed against the far-right policies of then Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, while McTeigue's (and producers Larry and Andy Wachowski's) vision is a muddled mélange of allusions to current events, with hefty dollops of political bumper-sticker slogans that don't quite add up to a manifesto. If you were looking for an Idea Movie, this one isn't it.

Still, there's lots of stuff that gets "blowed-up real good" and some pretty nifty fight scenes to keep you awake between Hugo Weaving's (V) droning monologues, alliterative litanies and asexual seduction of Natalie Portman's character.

Portman gives a great emotional performance as Evey, the protégé of the terrorist/freedom fighter V. Her only problem is nailing down that English accent. Sometimes it's there, sometimes it's ... over there behind the couch. Go Natty! Fetch the accent! Gooood girl.



Hugo Weaving as V

As the first of the big, dumb blockbusters to numb us this year, "V For Vendetta" will certainly please 14-year-old boys and stoner college freshmen who've just discovered that the dude on their T-shirt was some guy name Che and he, like, rocked and stuff.

For anyone else, it's just another noisy movie pretending to be relevant.

CELEBRITY extra
by Evelyn Green

Q. Please, please, please settle a question my sister and I have about John O'Hurley ("Seinfeld," "Dancing With the Stars"). She says he was once married to Eva Longoria of "Desperate Housewives" when they were both on "The Young and The Restless." I don't think so. — Bobbie S.

A. The multi-talented O'Hurley was never married to Eva Longoria. However, there are some interesting coincidences: His first wife was an Eva — Eva LaRue — who later married another Hibernian named John — in this case, John Callahan — who was her soap castmate on "All My Children."

Also, O'Hurley, who now stars in the Broadway hit "Chicago," did his stint on "Y&R" as Dr. James Grainger, the biological father of Christine Blair (Lauralee Bell) a decade before Longoria joined the soap as Isabella Williams.

Q. I'm curious about the title, "Dame," that Elizabeth Taylor got, and was wondering what it stands for. When I was growing up, for a woman to be called a dame was an insult. — Margaret B.

A. A Dame is the female equivalent of a knight, who is called Sir. The honor is bestowed by the reigning monarch in recognition of achievements in industry, science, the arts, sports, government, etc. Several actresses have become Dames over the years: Besides Elizabeth Taylor, two that come to mind are Dame Judi Dench of the Bond movies, and Dame Diana Rigg of "The Avengers" series. The title Dame has also been awarded as a religious honor within the Benedictine order.

Q. As a fan going back to when he played Little Beaver in the Red Ryder movies, I would like to know if Robert Blake will work again. Also, I always wondered where he got his nickname, Mickey? — Edward M.

John O'Hurley

A. Robert Blake, who was found not guilty of killing his wife, Bonnie Lee Bakley, says he plans to go back to work as an actor. Said to be bankrupt after paying legal fees, the 72-year-old Blake, who was ordered to pay Bakley's family $30 million in damages in a civil suit, is currently working for several friends. There are rumors of a production deal in the works for the former "Baretta" star, but no confirmation.

Blake's nickname, Mickey, comes from his real name, Michael James Bubitosi.

NOTE: A reader, Amos R., wanted to know how to get a copy of the 1984 film "Heart Sounds," starring James Garner and Mary Tyler Moore. My thanks to Les L., who advises Amos R. "to try listing his wants on the eBay wanted items or looking under movies for sale."

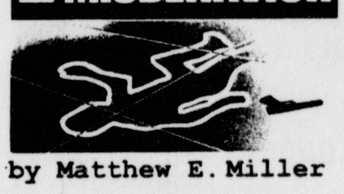
Miller's Tales OF MISBEHAVIOR



by Matthew E. Miller

Tell the Kids I Died in 1979

The State (Columbia, S.C.) reports that a woman discovered how the father of her children had avoided paying tens of thousands of dollars in child support: by faking his own death in a bar fight in Alabama more than 20 years before. He had broken out of prison and was presumed dead after police received a phone call describing the brawl, but once the ex-wife tipped them off that he'd been alive all along, authorities found the man living with his girlfriend in Myrtle Beach, S.C., and they arrested him. "He'd rather be dead than have to support them," his ex-wife said, referring to the children. She also said he'd "rather climb a tree and tell a lie than stand on the ground and tell the truth."

You Won't Take Me Alive

A police officer pulled a cyclist over for riding at night without a light, the Orlando Sentinel (Fla.) reports. At that point, the cyclist pulled out a semi-automatic weapon and pointed it at the officer, then ran away.

Delusions of Pet Ownership

The Corvallis Gazette-Times (Ore.) reports that police arrested a woman, age 27, for trespassing and criminal mischief, and for violating her release agreement. She entered the home of a man she mistakenly thought was her father. She opened his mail and tried to steal his dog. A mental evaluation revealed she was on methamphetamines.

The Suppering of Young Werther

The Durango Herald (Colo.) reports that a young man was seen eating by himself and "talking to himself about odd subjects."

Crime Problems Down, Misery Up

Respondents to a 2005 survey by the National Opinion Research Center (University of Chicago) reported more significant negative events in their lives —unemployment, divorce, hospitalization — than in the previous survey (1991). However, fewer people reported having problems with the law.

Baseball Between the Numbers: Why Everything You Know About the Game Is Wrong
Edited by Jonah Keri
(Basic Books, $24.95)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

In 1996, a group of dedicated fans of baseball began applying their various talents to understand the game better. The players, plays, pitches, throws and hits were studied and scrutinized to answer the perplexing question of what it all meant. The result is an insightful, intelligent and fun book that is guaranteed to appeal to both casual fans of the game and hardcore stat heads.

There are dozens of intriguing essays throughout its 400-plus pages. For example, does a batting order really matter? Is Alex Rodriquez overpaid? Did Derek Jeter deserve the Gold Glove? How much does Coors Field really matter? Are teams letting their closers go to waste? Also included in the mix is the one question that borders on both heresy and blasphemy: Is Barry Bonds better than Babe Ruth?

Statistics are everything in the game of baseball, but in this collection of essays edited by Jonah Keri, they are also fun. Despite the fact that more people now watch the sport than ever before, a good analytical book that's truly entertaining has not been available, at least not until now.

Included in this collection are things you think you know about baseball, but probably don't. Did you know a four-man pitching rotation is better than five, that multimillion-dollar salaries have little relation to today's outrageous ticket prices, or that a player can have 100 RBIs and still have a mediocre year at the plate? I didn't.

It took 10 years, 11 annuals, a successful Web site and numerous multimedia outlets to make this book possible, but all of the time and effort was worth it.

Books reviewed in this column are available online or at your local bookstore.

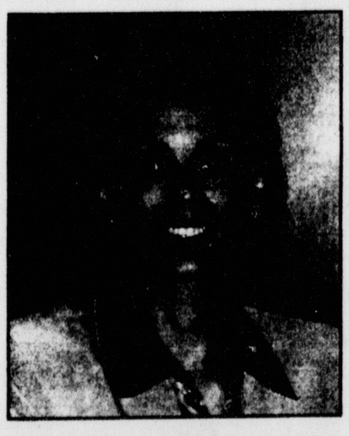
Fave Foods OF THE FAMOUS
by Steven Austin



Cheryl Lemke

Cheryl Lemke is celebrating her 20th year as an on-camera meteorologist with The Weather Channel. A native of Omaha, Neb., Lemke worked for TV stations throughout the Midwest before starting at The Weather Channel in 1986. She became interested in weather and science as a child, but attributes her career in meteorology to a high-school teacher who encouraged her to pursue her dream. For more information, go to: www.weather.com

Here's the scenario: A storm knocks out power at your home for a week. You can't cook a thing. In addition to water and a manual can opener, what foods do you have on hand?

"I would be in good shape. I have peanuts, pistachios and a lot of peanut butter and crackers on hand. I also have the pantry stocked up with various canned soups, canned ravioli and Starkist tuna in pouches. I have bananas, apples and carrots, too, all readily available."

If they began naming hurricanes after foods, what would be a good choice for a name, and why?

"I think they should name hurricanes after fast-food items. If a hurricane were called Big Mac or The Whopper, then people would surely take that storm seriously."

On the set, has anyone ever been caught chewing on food when the show comes back from commercial?

"I can't recall anybody ever getting caught eating while we were on the air. I know I personally try to avoid eating during commercial breaks because I had a bad experience early on in my career at The Weather Channel. One morning, somebody was nice enough to bring in Krispy Kreme doughnuts. I was working a show, but during the commercial break I did eat a delicious glazed doughnut. Unfortunately, a little piece of glaze got stuck in my throat, and moments later while I was doing my segment on the air, I just kept coughing. From then on, I told myself I would never ever eat during my shows."

Favorite flavor for a sno-cone, and why?

"Blue raspberry. It tastes great, and it leaves your tongue a funky blue color."

Do you have a "worst waiter/waitress ever" story?

"My husband and I were eating at a well-known seafood restaurant. The service was slow, but finally our meals were brought out to us. The plate brought out to my husband was not what he had ordered. We immediately notified the waitress. She paused for a few seconds and then realized that my husband's meal was brought to the wrong table. So the waitress walks over to a nearby table and tries switching plates with another customer. We were horrified. Needless to say, my husband and I promptly walked out."

CHERYL'S HEARTY BEEF STEW

2	pounds beef chuck, cut into small bite-sized chunks
3/4	cup all-purpose flour
1 1/2	teaspoons salt
1/2	teaspoon pepper
1	teaspoon paprika
4	carrots, sliced
3	medium to large potatoes, cut into small cubes
2	onions, chopped
1	stalk celery, sliced
1	tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2	cups beef bouillon or beef stock
1	large bay leaf
1	package frozen peas

Mix meat with the flour, salt, pepper and paprika. After the meat has been coated with the flour mixture, place it into a crockpot. Add carrots, potatoes, onions and celery to the crockpot on top of the meat. Then add the Worcestershire sauce along with the beef stock/bouillon, and finally place the bay leaf on top of the vegetables. Cover and cook on high heat for 4 to 5 hours. Occasionally stir the stew during the cooking process, about once every 60-90 minutes. During the final hour of cooking, pour the frozen peas into the crockpot and replace the lid. The beef stew should thicken during the cooking process, but if broth appears too thin, then simply mix in a little more flour. Thoroughly stir the stew when done, and make sure to find the bay leaf and remove it before serving. Serves 6.

Strange BUT TRUE

• In a recent survey of the dating scene, respondents were asked about how long they usually take on a first date to decide whether or not they're interested in a second date. The majority of women — 64 percent of them — say they take an hour to figure out if they're interested enough to go out again. The men, though, seem to be more decisive: 79 percent of them say that 15 minutes is long enough.

YOLO COUNTY SUPERVISORS:

WE ELECTED YOU TO FIND SOLUTIONS...

Whereas, the Yolo County Board of Supervisors is using eminent domain, government's 'most awesome power' to seize the 26-square mile Conaway Ranch; and,

Whereas, by using eminent domain, the financially troubled county can PROFIT from the ranch's prime farmland, I-5 frontage property and water rights.

Whereas, Yolo County doesn't have the money to seize the Ranch, so supervisors are relying on a loan from a casino in Yolo County; and,

Whereas, for 10 months, the County has refused to explain its string-less deal with the casino owners or its management plan for the ranch; and,

Whereas, the County recently increased it's legal budget for seizing the Conaway Ranch to $1.9 million ...and there is no end in sight; and,

Whereas, $1.9 million could be better spent on 700 more clients in the Yolo County Healthcare for Indigents Program; 175,000 more hours of in-home care; hiring more public safety officials to patrol our streets and keep us safe; or paving more than 1 million feet of county roads; and,

Whereas, Supervisor Duane Chamberlain, Woodland Mayor Matt Rexroad, Woodland City Council Member Neal Peart, the Yolo County Farm Bureau and many others all OPPOSE the County's efforts.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED: We, the undersigned, STRONGLY OPPOSE YOLO COUNTY'S EFFORTS TO SEIZE THE CONAWAY RANCH and we urge our county supervisors to negotiate a compromise that keeps the property in private ownership.
